```
import numpy as np
import matplotlib.pyplot as plt
```

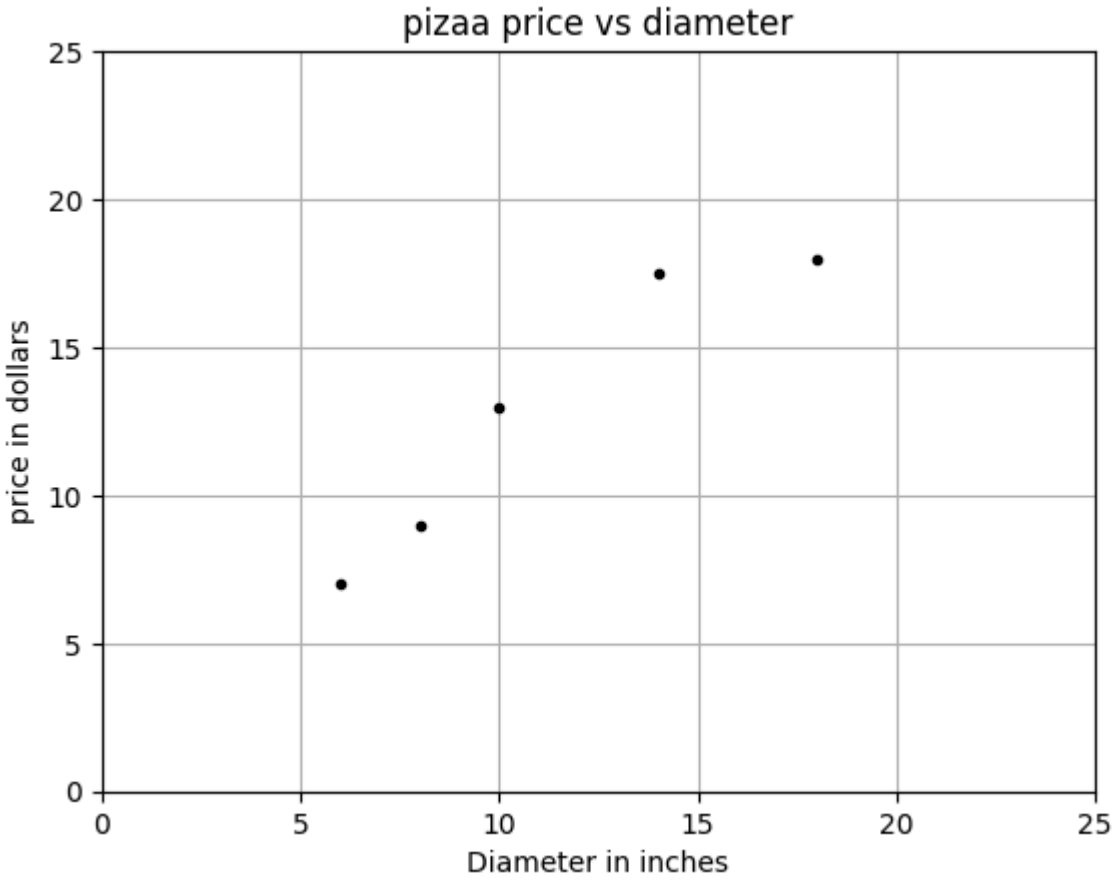

```
x = np.array([[6] , [8], [10], [14], [18]]) #pizza diameter
y = [7, 9 , 13, 17.5, 18 ] #pizza price
```

```
import numpy as np
import matplotlib.pyplot as plt

#we will see visually
plt.figure() #create a unvisible figure
plt.title("pizaa price vs diameter")
plt.xlabel("Diameter in inches")
plt.ylabel("price in dollars")

plt.plot(x,y, 'k.')

plt.axis((0,25, 0,25))
plt.grid(True)
plt.show()
```

```
from sklearn.linear_model import LinearRegression
```

```
model = LinearRegression()  #create linear regression model
```

```
#training starts here :
model.fit(x,y)
```

```
▾ LinearRegression
LinearRegression()
```

```
test_pizza = np.array([[12]]) #diamer of 12 inches Prediction ?
```

```
predicted_price = model.predict(test_pizza)
```

```
print("A 12 inches pizza will cost rs" , predicted_price)
```

```
A 12 inches pizza will cost rs [13.68103448]
```